

How will your new weekday program with Moody Radio differ from Janet Parshall's America?

Moody Radio is and always has been about providing insight into the Living Word of God so people can apply it in real ways to their own lives. As we look at the headlines of the day through the lens of Scripture, we will encourage our friends to start developing a biblical worldview. It's amazing how that can change your perspective on everything.

Do you plan to take listener call-ins?

Callers are the most important part of the program. We want to walk people into the marketplace of ideas, a place where a variety of ideas are freely debated in public discourse, and let them hear what is being bought and sold in the real world. Callers help us to dig deeper, find biblical answers, sharpen our rationale for the Christian faith, defend our faith against objections and expose the flaws of other world views. I have no interest in talking to people. I want to visit with people and hear what they have to say.

Will you continue to host your weekend show Talking It Over With Janet Parshall?

Saturday, May 1, will be our last Talking It Over With Janet Parshall. We will then transition to our new daily program. Each week, we will select some of the highlights of our week, and put it all together for a two hour "best of" program that will air on the weekends.

For those who enjoyed Janet Parshall's America for your commentary on issues, but not for religious reasons, are we still going to hear that program?

Scripture says, "Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaks." It's still me, and it will still be my heart's perspective on applying the Word to the world. That will never change.
